Manager's Commentary

Market Conditions

The Africa Opportunity Fund (AOF) reported a 7.2% decrease in NAV to $2.239/share in May, while its share price was unchanged at $0.800/share.

African equity markets delivered broadly positive returns in May. Performance was led by Egypt (+4.1%) and Nigeria (+3.9%), with South Africa (+2.8%) and Morocco (+2.0%) also posting solid advances. Kenya was largely unchanged, declining 0.1%. Africa-focused ETFs reflected the broader market gains, with the Van Eck Africa Index (AFK US) up 3.1%, the Amundi Pan African (LGQM GY) up 4.8%, and the DBX MSCI Africa Top 50 (XMAF LN) up 3.9%.

Portfolio Highlights

The Fund's return of -7.2% in May was primarily driven by its largest holding, Enterprise Group, which generated a total US dollar return of -13%. The decline reflected a combination of share price weakness and the depreciation of the Ghana cedi against the US dollar. Seplat Energy also detracted from performance as lower Brent crude oil prices weighed on the stock. These losses were partially offset by positive contributions from Mashonaland and Valterra Platinum.
