ANNEX

For the purposes of the Notes, the risk factor entitled "Israel's political and military environment may continue to be volatile" on page 17 of the Offering Circular shall be deemed to be deleted and replaced with the following:

"Israel's political and military environment may continue to be volatile"

Since the establishment of the State of Israel in 1948, a number of armed conflicts have occurred between Israel and its Arab neighbours. Political instability in the Middle East has increased since the terrorist attacks of 11 September 2001, and news of Iran's reported nuclear programme. Since 2005, when Israel withdrew from the Gaza strip, terrorist violence has increased. Hamas launched an unprecedented attack on Israel on 7 October 2023, following which Israel has proceeded to undertake military action to defend itself. As at today's date it is unclear how long this situation may continue. If the current situation continues to escalate, or the level of instability and violence increases further in the future, including through the involvement of further groups or nations in attacks against Israel, this may have a significant adverse impact on Israel's capital markets, the Israeli economy, Israel's sovereign credit ratings, and the level of tourism and foreign investment in Israel, among other things.

Since January 2011, there has been political instability and civil unrest in numerous Middle East and North African countries, including Libya, Egypt, Tunisia, Yemen and Syria. This unrest has resulted in the removal of long-standing leadership in several of the aforementioned countries and created turbulent political situations in others. As Israel is situated in the centre of this region, it closely monitors these events, aiming to protect its economic, political and security interests. It should be noted that such instances of instability in the Middle East and North Africa region have not so far materially affected Israel's financial or political situation, and countries who have signed peace agreements with Israel remain committed to them, regardless of internal political developments. However, there can be no assurance that such instability in the region will not escalate in the future, such instability will not spread to additional countries in the region, current or new governments in the region will be successful in maintaining domestic order and stability, or Israel's economic or political situation will not thereby be affected."
